

In order to beat two swords you need to attack the flank, so in this case the thrust is easiest to beat, so go around the outside of that and avoid the cut on the other side entirely... I would use the belt buckle to attack the temple and ignore the swords entirely.

There is an aikido move that does precisely this, where you deflect the hand holding the sword by striking the wrist with your left hand, then strike the temple with the knuckles of the other hand. The attack is to the right side of the opponent.

Regards, Tim